

COVID-19 IS STILL AROUND

PLATINUM
HEALTH

As South Africa reopens its economy, new waves of infections are inevitable. The risk of infection outbreaks is projected to increase as most people return to work and therefore it's of utmost importance that we all remain vigilant.

Although the lockdown has slowed down the rate of transmission, the virus is very much present, and will be around for a long time.

To reduce the risk of transmission, everyone has a role to play and it all starts with a healthy behaviour.

- Always wear a mask when out in public or at work.
- Continue to wash or sanitise your hands often.
- Maintain a social distance of 1.5 – 2 metres from others.

These are the golden rules!

The trajectory is in our hands, and it's everybody's business. Be responsible, play your part and contribute to stop this pandemic.
